AGED MAN REPORTS ROBBERY

Harrison Jones Thought His Home Was Entered and Valuable Taken

HAD MISLAID "SAFE" BOX

Quite a little excitement was prevalent about town on Monday evening when Harrison Jones reported that thieves had entered his house during the day and stolen a box containing $3,500 worth of liberty bonds, and other valuable papers. But when relatives of the aged man were approached on the subject they gave it as their opinion that he had mislaid the papers himself and had for the time forgotten their whereabouts.

Mr. Jones, who is well advanced in the eighties, lives alone in his home on Spafford street, and as he had been in poor health for a long time, his neighbors have been in the habit of keeping an eye on him, and noting if he were about each day. Last Sunday he was overheard in a heated argument with a couple of men but no attention was paid to it at the time, but when he failed to appear as usual Monday morning, his nearest neighbors began to wonder if he were ill or anything had happened to him. Up to noon he had not appeared. His niece Miss Lottie Jones missed him and going to the house looked about but did not enter. Mr. Campbell and Mr. John Brogan, both close neighbors, talked the matter over and decided to go in and see if all was well. Accordingly the two entered the house and went from room to room but failing to see Mr. Jones they concluded that he had gone away although it was a very unusual proceeding for him, so locking the house they departed, and thought no more about it until they saw him get out of an auto in front of his home in the early part of the evening. He at once went into the house and in less than five minutes hurried out reporting that his valuables were gone.

If now develops that he went to several places about town and made the same report, and in one instance at least flashed a sizable roll of bills.

This leads to the theory that whatever the excitement of Sunday may have been, it was too much for the aged man.

It is learned that he arose early Monday morning and without making his plans known to anyone went to Waukegan. Relatives from that place brought him home in the evening but when he discovered the supposed theft he went back to Waukegan and placed the matter in the hands of the States attorney.

Relatives here refused to take the matter seriously and stoutly maintain that a search of the house would reveal the missing papers. So firm were they in this belief that when he had yet returned home on Wednesday afternoon, his brother Riley Jones and Miss Lottie Jones together with the village marshal, Wm. Gray, entered the house and in a short time located the box of papers. Miss Jones at once called the Waukegan relatives on the phone and through them learned that Mr. Jones had left Waukegan Tuesday afternoon to enter a soldier's home. He is as yet unaware that his property was not stolen but was where he himself had placed it previous to his departure from home.

Sun Nearer Earth.

The sun is nearest the earth—or perihelion—at the beginning of the year, or when the northern hemisphere has winter. It is at its greatest distance, or aphelion, about the middle of the year, or during the summer of the northern hemisphere. The least distance of the sun from the earth is more than 91,000,000 miles, and the greatest more than 94,000,000. This mean distance is commonly stated as 92,000,000.

Hatch-McDougall Wedding Last Week

Alice R. Hatch and Eugene J. McDougall surprised their many friends by being quietly married at three o'clock last Thursday afternoon, June 28, at the home of the bride's father, Frank Hatch. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Reitz in one of the large parlors, the contracting parties taking their places before the open fire places, in the presence of only their immediate relatives.

The bride was beautifully gowned in white satin and georgette and was unattended. The groom wore the conventional black. Refreshments were served following the ceremony, after which the bridal couple left for a short wedding trip to Chicago that evening. Mrs. McDougall is one of the most highly accomplished young ladies of the community and is the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hatch. She was a graduate of the Wilmet high school in the class of '07 and afterwards graduated from the Elgin high school, also attended Rockford College and secured her degree at the Champaign University. She taught at Crystal Lake and Channahon Lake very successfully.

The groom has spent his entire life on the Alex. McDougall farm south of this village and is highly respected by the residents of the community. For the summer months the bridal couple will make their home with the bride's parents.

The many friends of the newly married couple join in extending best wishes and congratulations. A large number of them managed to personally greet them with a good old fashioned thirty-day upon their arrival here Saturday night.—Wilmet Correspondent.

Harold Joice, Drowned in Fox Lake Last Sunday

"If mother was here she wouldn't let me go in the water, but poor mother is dead and so can't tell me to stay out of the lake." These were the last words ever spoken by little 11-year old Harold Joice, an orphan who was adopted by James Phelan of Fox Lake. The little fellow had gone in bathing Sunday afternoon with his aunt and uncle who had come out from Chicago to spend Sunday with their nephew.

The drowning came immediately after a big launch had passed the bathers and it is supposed the undertow caused by the launch dragged the boy under because it was then that his uncle missed him. The uncle immediately commenced diving and after about 20 minutes succeeded in bringing the body to the surface. Every effort was made to resuscitate the little fellow but after a half hour was spent all hope was abandoned and the coroner was notified.

A pathetic phase of the drowning is that Harold was the last of the little family which had lived in Chicago and had been happy and prosperous until the death of the father about two years ago. Then followed the death of the mother and little sister last fall during the flu epidemic. Thus little Harold was left alone until taken into the family of the Phelans.

The inquest was held with the verdict of accidental death.

Making Friends.

If one would have friends she must prove a friend. We cannot play a grouchy part and favorably impress others around us. Whatever Fate has sent us or denied us in the way of good looks doesn't matter. If we would be happy and help some one to feel likewise, we must put self in the background occasionally and show to that "some one" that we want to be her friend.—New York Evening Telegram.

Avoid Habit of Musing.

Few habits are more injurious than musing, which differs from thinking as pacing one's chamber does from walking abroad. The mind learns nothing, and is not strengthened but weakened, returning perpetually over the same barren track. Where the thoughts are sower the evil is doubly great, and not only time and vigor are squandered, but melancholy becomes fixed. It is really a disease, and the question how it should be treated is one of the most important in anthropology.—J. W. Alexander.

F. RHYMER DIES VERY SUDDENLY

Was Striken While at the Loon Lake Ice House Monday Afternoon

FUNERAL HELD THURSDAY

Last Monday afternoon occurred the very sudden death of Frederick Rymer, a well known resident of this locality. Although Mr. Rymer had been poorly for a long time due to trouble with his heart, he had seemed no worse than usual up to a few moments previous to his death. Being a member of Olson Camp M. W. A., he had paid his dues that very morning and had done several little odd jobs about the place.

In the afternoon he hitched up the horse and went to the Loon Lake ice house for ice. While loading it he talked and joked with several others and appeared in the best of spirits. Just as he was about to untie his horse to start for home, he fell to the ground. Rushing to him his companions at once saw that his condition was very serious and placing him in the wagon they started for his home, hoping to reach there before he passed away but such was not the case for he had breathed his last before they had proceeded half of the short distance between the two places.

The deceased was born in England on June 18, 1862. When a young man twenty-four years of age he decided to try his fortune in America and accordingly came to Lake county and lectured near Antioch. A year later he was followed by Miss Selma Simons and on the nineteenth day of June 1887, a few days after her arrival they were united in marriage in the old M. E. church in this village.

They at once located on a farm near Loon Lake and since then they have continuously resided in that vicinity. To them three children were born: Mrs. Mabel Hook of Gurnee, Joseph and William both of this place, all of whom with the mother survive him.

The funeral services were held this afternoon at two o'clock in the M. E. church. The remains were laid at rest in the Hillside cemetery with Woodmen services at the grave.

Daughter of Jake Christensen Meets With Mower Accident

A very serious accident happened on the Jake Christensen farm just east of town on Wednesday forenoon when the little six-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Christensen was caught in the sickle of a mowing machine.

One of the boys had gone to the field to cut the alfalfa and the little girl fearful that some of the little potatoes might be harmed ran along and was chasing them out of the path of the machine.

The child very evidently did not realize how far the sickle extended out in the tall grass and in her earnestness she ran to close. In a twinkling the sharp blades had slashed into her foot injuring it very severely. A hurryup call was sent to Dr. Warriner and hurrying to the Christensen home he saw at once that it was a hospital case. He dressed the injured member temporarily and then bearing that the train was fifteen minutes late he hurried the child to the depot and was very fortunately enabled to get her to the city without loss of time.

She was taken to Wesley hospital where it is thought that she will be obliged to remain there for some little time.

Horses Arrive for Racing Meet at Libertyville

Although there are stable accommodations for 450 horses at Libertyville where a twenty-day running meeting will start Friday afternoon with six races daily, applications for stable room are coming in so fast that an extra crew of workmen were put on the job Tuesday building temporary stables. Hundreds of telegrams were received by manager O'Leary asking him to reserve stable room, some well-known horsemen sending in requests. Attorney General Burdage has given orders to his investigating department to be at the racetrack on July 4, to obtain evidence on which to base prosecutions for gambling if it is attempted.

Waukegan Man Involved in Navy Scandal

It became known Monday a triple investigation is now being carried on at the Great Lakes Naval Training station by civilian and naval intelligence department into the mysterious disappearance of funds which may approximate $60,000.

The investigation started three weeks ago when it was learned approximately $50,000 worth of photographic material and supplies was missing. Three chief petty officers were arrested by the provost marshal and questioned. They were released but were notified that they are subject to further call.

It was learned the graft in the photographic department has been going on for nearly a year. Provost Marshal McDuffie said he was gathering evidence slowly and expected to produce evidence in a short time that may incriminate several men formerly employed in that division.

It had been rumored around the station there had been something "shady" about this department for some time.

A majority of the officers and men who were detailed formerly to handle this branch of station activities have now been discharged or sent to sea, but it was stated they will be recalled if discrepancies are discovered.

The investigation into the $13,000 safe robbery of the Navy Relief society, which took place in April, is still "on the fire."

A Great Lakes officer said Monday it has been discovered a civilian in Waukegan had for some time been selling photographic material; believed to have been obtained from sailors. He has not been arrested, but it is said investigators can place their hands on him at any time.

It was said approximately fifty former sailors who were in the athletic photographic and navy relief departments may be summoned before the investigation is closed.

Big Iron Works to Locate in Waukegan

Heads of a large iron works company now located in Chicago, a plant employing eighty men, were expected to arrive in Waukegan Tuesday for the purpose of going into details for the obtaining of a suitable site. They are said to look with favor on the proposition made to them and it is possible that the deal will be closed.

The heads of this plant were favorably impressed with a site at the Manufacturers terminal where they planned to put up their own plant but were deterred at first by the price charged for the land. It is said that a new proposition has been put up to the heads of the plant by the terminal which provides for leasing the necessary tract of land. This proposition is said to appeal to the Chicago concern and it is hoped that the deal can be closed.

The concern is one of the largest that has sought to obtain a site in Waukegan in a long time.

Mystery of a Cat

Did some one lose a cute little Manx kitten by placing it in the wrong auto? Or did some one adopt a novel scheme of giving that same little Manx kitten away? Anyway some one placed a nice Manx kitten in some one else's automobile Wednesday evening. If it was placed there by mistake and the owner really wants it, they may find out where it is by calling at this office and paying the price of a "lost and found ad." But if the owner didn't want it and was merely trying to palm it off on some one else, let us say right here that they did a good job for Mr. Manx cat has fallen into a good home where there are no little folks to disturb him and no doubt he is perfectly satisfied with his new surroundings.

Hint to Housewives. To clean glazed tiles when spotted, wash them with lemon juice, leave for a quarter of an hour, and then polish with a soft cloth. Tiles should not be washed but only rubbed with a damp cloth and polished with a little skim milk and water.

Hurry Gets Nowhere.

The man or woman who works in a hurry, always at high tension, with no knowledge of the value of relaxation, produces results far inferior to the quiet, composed worker, who knows how to conserve his strength. He can do more, do it better and at less cost of strength and energy than his hurried associate.

Mad as a Hatter.

Mad, in Anglo-Saxon, is frequently used as a synonym for violent, furious, angry or venomous. Atter, in old English, means adder or viper. Hence the combination of the two words "mad" and the corrupted "hatter" merely means "as venomous as an adder." And the proverbial saying has, therefore, no reference to hattermaking at all.

NEWS OF VARIOUS KINDS

It is generally conceded that better than 90 per cent of the 1918 Wisconsin tobacco crop, the largest ever produced in the state, has now passed out of the hands of the farmers.

John Park sold his farm of 200 acres in the town of Watford to Wm. Foote, of Troy Center, last week, consideration being $19,000. Possession will be given next spring.

Another record was set at the semi-annual sale of the Waukegan County Guernsey Breeders' association when sixty-five head of pure bred stock were sold for an average price of $534. The total receipts of the sale were $34,645.

Walter P. Sawyer, for years president of the Exchange National bank at Waukegan, was killed by a Soo Line passenger train at a crossing last Wednesday night. He was deaf. He was born in Vermont seventy-two years ago and came there in 1853.

A special representative of the Japanese government attended the pure bred Holstein sale at Waukegan last week and purchased fifteen head of cattle. The Japanese government intends to use these cattle to stimulate the farmers to take more pride in the live stock of that empire.

The long discussed plan of establishing a Building Company in Waukegan appears to be very near realization. Secretary Hollister of the Chamber of Commerce admitted that an out of town capitalist has given his promise that he will invest $25,000 in such a building company, thereby giving a substantial nucleus.

Four years ago John Nelsen, one of the proprietors of the Fox River hotel, lost a machinist hammer when his boat tipped over near the new civic park, Watford. One day last week he was throwing stones into the river near the scene of the tip-over in order to watch a water spaniel dive for them. He was greatly surprised when the dog came up with the long lost hammer in his mouth.

Salvationists to Build Home in Waukegan

A soldiers and sailors home in Waukegan costing $100,000 will be put up as soon as possible by the Salvation Army at the corner of Clayton and Sheridan roads. The construction of the building will begin August 1, according to a statement made by the secretary of the Chamber of Commerce.

The lot on the south west corner owned by C. J. Jones of the First National bank has been purchased by the Salvation Army and they will put up a three story building. The deal has been pending for some time but the announcement of its completion was first made Tuesday.

The building is to be made of concrete and brick and is to be three stories high. In the basement there will be a cafeteria lunch room with complete equipment. On the first floor there will be lounging and reception rooms leaving the two upper floors for sleeping quarters.

Worry Is Twin of Fear.

Worry is a homeopathic or attenuated dose of fear, and fear as all know, is a powerful depressant of the circulation and nervous system. It is fear that paralyzes the animal that is "charmed" by a snake; it is fear that "strikes at the heart" of a child frightened by some real or fancied apparition or threat, predisposing to shock or collapse. It is harmful emotion. There is no doubt that a susceptible individual might be actually "frightened to death."

Hardly Complimentary.

Children Called to Excelsior Springs by Father's Illness

Antioch relatives of Albert Chinn, a former resident, received word last week that he was in a very critical condition at Excelsior Springs, Mo., and that if they wished to see him alive to come at once.

His four sons, Walter, Victor, Percy and Frank, left on the former's car Friday morning and arrived at their destination Sunday morning. They found their father in a serious condition, his trouble being hardening of the liver, Victor remaining with him, while the other three returned home after a few days stay, arriving here Tuesday morning.

Mr. Chinn, whose home is in Oklahoma City, Okla., has been in poor health for the past few months and had gone to Excelsior Springs a couple of weeks ago to take the baths, with the intention of staying there a few weeks and then proceeding on to Waukegan to see his daughter, Mrs. Martin Weber, and other relatives in this vicinity. His plans were, however, very much changed when he was taken seriously ill while at the springs.

EVERY CITIZEN AN AMERICAN

Women's Foreign Language Division of Victory Liberty Loan Committee Has Active Organization.

"Every citizen an American. Every American a government stockholder. Bolshevik doctrines will not flourish in the minds and hearts of those who have a proprietary interest in their government."

That is the threefold object of the newly organized woman's foreign-language division of the Victory Liberty loan, according to Mrs. Edward Bemis, director for the Seventh federal reserve district.

In reply to a question, Mrs. Bemis said: "Our foreign-born women have often had reason in the past to think we cared little for them, but now since their sons and brothers and husbands have fought side by side with ours the differences have fallen away. We are all women of one country, working to one end—a united America."

Mrs. Bemis believes there need be no lack of co-operation between the native and foreign-born inhabitants of America. She is inclined to place a large part of the responsibility for a lack of united interest at the door of the countless native Americans who stand in need of re-Americanizing. War work has shown that much of the renewed patriotism on the part of descendants of the older generations of Americans may well be learned from our patriotic foreign born.

The Council of Foreign-Language Women has been presenting "Gifts of the Nations" to the people of Chicago since the Third Liberty loan campaign. After a program attended by fifteen nationalities, the majority being Americans, one foreign-born woman said: "This is the first time since I came to America that I have been asked to do anything with the American people." Said another woman: "I always could speak enough English to get things at the store, but never before did American ladies want to talk with me. Now I shall get books and learn to speak English like the rest of them."

"Many do not realize that the heritages of many of our foreign nationalities may well be emulated by our far newer civilization," said Mrs. Bemis. "There is an innate courtesy in some of these older countries, and they have a patriotism engendered by years of seeking the liberty found in America."

"We want to know our foreign-language neighbors for what they can teach us as much as for the service that we ourselves can render them."

"Every member of each community has an interest in supporting our government's financial program. We must bring the boys home; we must establish business for our returned soldiers and we must help this country and Europe to stand free and for peace. We women are as interested in this as men can possibly be."

The five states of the Seventh district, Michigan, Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin and Iowa, will have a foreign-language chairman for women. Each county where there are resident foreign groups will have as county chairman a woman who understands the local needs of the various communities. Group meetings are planned for each nationality wherever it exists in considerable numbers.

"Out of this work will come—if our hearts are in it—that united interest in the service of our country which we call Americanization."

Girl of Mystery! House of Mystery!

Synopsis.—Thomas K. Barnes, a wealthy New Yorker on a walking trip in New England, is threatened by a mountain storm. At dusk at a lonely cross-roads, miles from Hart's tavern, where he intends to pass the night, he meets a girl in a similar plight, bound for a dwelling house called Green Fancy. Along comes an automobile for the girl. She gives him a lift to his tavern. There he falls in with a stranded troupe of "barnstorming" actors, of which Lyndon Rushcroft is the star and "Miss Thackeray" the leading woman. The theatrical people are doing hotel work for their board.

Barnes laughed aloud. There was no withstanding the fellow's sprightly impudence.

"I happen to enjoy walking," said he.

"If I enjoyed it as much as you do I'd be limping into Harlem by this time," said Mr. Dillingford sadly. "But you see I'm an actor. I'm too proud to walk—"

The cracked bell on the office desk interrupted him, somewhat peremptorily. Mr. Dillingford's face assumed an expression of profound dignity. He lowered his voice as he gave vent to the following:

"That man Jones is the meanest human being God ever let— Yes, sir, coming, sir!" He started for the open door with surprising alacrity.

Barnes surveyed the little bedchamber. It was just what he had expected it would be. The walls were covered with a garish paper selected by one who had an eye but not a taste for color—bright pink flowers that looked more or less like chunks of a shattered watermelon split promiscuously over a background of pearl gray. The bedstead, bureau and washstand were of tastelessly modern. Everything was as clean as a pin, however, and the bed looked comfortable. He stepped to the small, many-paned window and looked out into the night. The storm was at its height. In all his life he never had heard such a clatter of rain, nor a wind that shrieked so apallingly.

His thoughts went quite naturally to the woman who was out there in the thick of it. He wondered how she was faring and lamented that she was not in his place now and he in hers. What was she doing up in this God-forsaken country? What was the name of the place she was bound for? Green Fancy? What an odd name for a house!

And what sort of house—

His reflections were interrupted by the return of Mr. Dillingford, who carried a huge pewter pitcher from which steam arose in volume. At his heels strode a tall, cadaverous person in a checked suit.

Never had Barnes seen anything quite so overpowering in the way of a suit. Joseph's coat of many colors was no longer a vision of childhood. It was a reality. The cheeks were an inch square and each cube had a narrow border of azure blue. The general tone was a dirty gray, due no doubt to age and a constitution that would not allow it to cultivate its usefulness.

"Meet Mr. Bacon, Mr. Barnes," introduced Mr. Dillingford, going to the needless exertion of indicating Mr. Bacon with a generous sweep of his free hand. "Our heavy leads, Mr. Montague Bacon, also of New York."

"Ham and eggs, pork tenderloin, country sausage, rump steak and spring chicken," said Mr. Bacon in a cavernous voice, getting it over with while the list was fresh in his memory. "Fried and boiled potatoes, beans, succotash, onions, stewed tomatoes and—just a moment, please. Fried and boiled potatoes, beans—"

"Ham and eggs, potatoes and a cup or two of coffee," said Barnes, suppressing a desire to laugh.

"And apple pie," concluded the waiter triumphantly. "I knew you'd get it if you gave me time. As you may have observed, my dear sir, I am not what you would call an experienced waiter. As a matter of fact, I—"

The bell downstairs rang violently. Mr. Bacon departed in great haste.

While the traveler performed his ablutions Mr. Dillingford, for the moment disengaged, sat upon the edge of the bed and enjoyed himself. He talked.

"We were nice at the start," said he pensively. "Gradually we were reduced to seven, not including the manager. Two of 'em escaped before the smash. The low comedian and character actor old woman. Joe Backley and his wife. That left the star—Lyndon Rushcroft, the star—myself and Bacon, Tommy Gray, Miss Rushcroft, Miss Hughes and a woman named Bradley, seven of us. The woman named Bradley said her mother was dying in Burfalo, so the rest of us scraped together all the money we had—nine dollars and sixty cents—and did the right thing by her. Actors are always doing darn-fool things like that, Mr. Barnes. And what do you suppose she did? She took that money and bought two tickets to Albany, one for herself and another for the manager of the company—the lowest, meanest, ornery little white man that ever— But I am crabbng the old man's part. You ought to hear what he has to say about Mr. Manager. He can use words I never even heard of before. So that leaves just the four of us here, working off the two days' board bill of Bradley and the manager, Rushcroft's ungilded spree, and at the same time keeping our own slate clean. Miss Thackeray will no doubt make up your bed in the morning. She is temporarily a chambermaid. Cracking fine girl, too. Are you all ready? I'll lead you to the dining room. Or would you prefer a little appetizer beforehand? The taproom is right on the way. You mustn't call it the bar. Everybody in that little graveyard town down the road would turn over completely if you did. Hallowed tradition, you know."

"I don't mind having a cocktail. Will you join me?"

"As a matter of fact, I'm expected to," confessed Mr. Dillingford. "We've been drawing quite a bit of custom to the taproom. The rubes like to sit around and listen to conversation about Broadway and Bunker Hill and Old Point Comfort and other places, and then go home and tell the neighbors that they knew quite a number of stage people. Humma nature, I guess. Listen! Hear that? Rushcroft reciting 'Gunga Din.' You can't hear the thunder for the noise he's making."

They descended the stairs and entered the taproom, where a dozen men were seated around the tables, all of them with pewter mugs in front of them. Standing at the top table—that is to say, the one farthest removed from the door and commanding the attention of every creature in the room—was the imposing figure of Lyndon Rushcroft. He was reciting, in a sonorous voice and with tremendous fervor, the famous Kilgus poem.

A general smile wiped the tragic expression from his face. He advanced upon Barnes and the beaming Mr. Dillingford, his hand extended.

"My dear fellow," he exclaimed reverendly, "how are you?" Cordially boomed in his voice. "I heard you had arrived. Welcome—thricefold welcome!" He neglected to say that Mr. Montague Bacon, in passing a few minutes before, had leaned over and whispered behind his hand:

"Fellow upstairs from New York, Mr. Rushcroft—follow named Barnes. Quite a swell, believe me."

It was a well-placed tip, for Mr. Rushcroft had been telling the natives for days that he knew everybody worth knowing in New York.

Barnes was momentarily taken aback. Then he rose to the spirit of the occasion.

"Hello, Rushcroft," he greeted, as if meeting an old-time and greatly beloved friend. "This is good. 'Pon my soul you are like a thriving date palm in the middle of an endless desert. How are you?"

They shook hands warmly. Mr. Dillingford slipped the newcomer on the shoulder affectionately, familiarly, and shouted:

"Who would have dreamed we'd run across good old Barnesy up here? By Jove, it's marvelous!"

"Friends, countrymen," boomed Mr. Rushcroft, "this is Mr. Barnes of New York. Not the man the book was written about but one of the best fellows God ever put into this little world of ours. I do not recall your names, gentlemen, or I would introduce each of you separately and divinely."

Lyndon Rushcroft was a tall, saggy man of fifty. Despite his determined greenness he was inclined to sag from the shoulders down. His head, huge and gray, appeared to be much too ponderous for his yielding body, and yet he carried it manfully, even theatrically. The lines in his dark, sunken face were like furrows; his nose was large and somewhat bulbous, his mouth wide and grim. Thick, black eyebrows shaded a pair of eyes in which white was no longer apparent—it had given way to a permanent red.

A two-days' stubble covered his chin and cheeks. Altogether he was a singular exemplification of one's idea of the old-time actor.

Passing through the office, his arm linked in one of Barnes', Mr. Rushcroft hesitated long enough to impress upon Landlord Jones the importance of providing his "distinguished friend, Robert W. Barnes," with the very best that the establishment afforded. Putnam Jones blinked slightly and his eyes sought the register as if to accuse or justify his memory. Then he spat copiously into the corner, a necessary preliminary to a grin. He hadn't much use for the great Lyndon Rushcroft. His grin was sardonic. Something told him that Mr. Rushcroft was about to be liberally fed.

CHAPTER III.

Mr. Rushcroft dissolves, Mr. Jones intervenes, and Two Men Ride Away.

Mr. Rushcroft explained that he had had his supper. In fact, he went on to confess, he had been compelled, like the dog, to "speak" for it. What could be more disgusting, more degrading, he murmured, than the spectacle of a man who had appeared in all of the principal theaters of the land as star and leading support to stars, settling for his supper by telling stories and reciting poetry in the taproom of a tavern?

"Still," he consented, when Mr. Barnes insisted that it would be a kindness to him, "since you put it that way, I dare say I could do with a little snack, as you so aptly put it. Just a bite or two. What have you ready, Miss Tilly?"

Miss Tilly was a buxom female of forty or thereabouts, with spectacles. She was one of a pair of sedentary waitresses who had been so long in the employ of Mr. Jones that he hated the sight of them.

Mr. Rushcroft's conception of a bite or two may have staggered Barnes, but it did not bewilder Miss Tilly. He had four eggs with his ham, and other things in proportion. He talked a great deal, proving in that way that it was a supper well worth speaking for. Among other things he dilated at great length upon his reasons for not being a member of the Players or the Lambs in New York city. It seems that he had promised his dear, devoted wife that he would never join a club of any description. Dear old girl, he would as soon have cut off his right hand as to break any promise made to her. He brushed something away from his eyes, and his chin, contracting, trembled slightly. "What is it, Mr. Bacon? Any word from New York?"

Mr. Bacon hovered near, perhaps hungrily.

"Our genial host has instructed me to say to his latest guest that the rates are two dollars a day, in advance, all dining-room checks payable on presentation," said Mr. Bacon, apologetically.

Rushcroft exploded. "O scurvy insult!" he boomed. "Confound him—"

The new guest was amiable. He interrupted the outraged star. "Tell Mr. Jones that I shall settle promptly," he said with a smile.

"It has just entered his brain that you may be an actor, Mr. Barnes," said Bacon.

Bacon, Tilly, overhearing, drew a step or two nearer. A sudden interest in Mr. Barnes developed. She had not noticed before that he was an uncommonly good-looking fellow. She always had said that she adored strong, "athletic" faces.

Later on she felt inspired to jot down, for use no doubt in some future literary production, a concise, though general, description of the magnificent Mr. Barnes. She utilized the back of the bill of fare and she wrote with the feverish ardor of one who dreads the loss of a first impression. I here, with append her visual estimate of the hero of this story:

"He was a tall, shapely specimen of mankind," wrote Miss Tilly. "Broad-shouldered. Smooth-shaven face. Penetrating gray eyes. Short, curly hair about the color of mine. Strong hands of good shape. Face tanned considerably. Heavy dark eyebrows. Good teeth, very white. Square chin. Lovely smile that seemed to light up the room for everybody within hearing. Nose ideal. Mouth same. Voice aristocratic and reverberating with education. Age about thirty or thirty-one. High as Croesus. Well-turned legs. Would make a good nobleman."

All this would appear to be reasonably definite were it not for the note regarding the color of his hair. It leaves to me the simple task of completing the very admirable description of Mr. Barnes by announcing that Miss Tilly's hair was an extremely dark brown.

Also it is advisable to append the following biographical information: Thomas Kingsbury Barnes, engineer, born in Montclair, N. J., September 20, 1885. Cornell and Rexus Arts, Paris. Son of the late Stephen S. Barnes, engineer, and Edith (Valentine) Barnes. Office, Metropolitan building, New York city. Residence, Amsterdam mansion, Clubs: (Lack of space prevents listing them here). Recreations, golf, tennis and horse-back riding. Fellow of the Royal Geographical society. Member of the Royal Legion and the Sons of the American Revolution.

Added to this, the mere announcement that he was in a position to indulge a fancy for long and perhaps aimless walking tours through mere or less out-of-the-way sections of his own country, to say nothing of excursions in Europe.

He was rich. Perhaps not as rich as measured in these Midas-like days, but rich beyond the demands of avarice. His legacy had been an ample one. The fact that he worked hard at his profession from one year's end to the other—not excluding the six devoted to mentally productive jaunts—is proof sufficient that he was not content to subsist on the fruits of another man's enterprise. He was a worker.

The first fortnight of a proposed six weeks' jaunt through upper New England terminated when he laid aside his heavy pack in the little bedroom at Hart's Tavern. Cockcrow would find him ready and eager to begin his third week. At least so he thought. But truth is, he had come to his journey's end; he was not to sling his pack for many a day to come.

After setting the mind of the landlord at rest, Barnes declined Mr. Rushcroft's invitation to "quaff" a cordial with him in the taproom, explaining that he was exceedingly tired and intended to retire early.

Instead of going up to his room immediately, however, he decided to have a look at the weather. His uneasiness concerning the young woman of the crossroads increased as he peered at the wall of blackness looming up beyond the circle of light. She was somewhere outside that sinister grasp of those lavalike hills, but was she living or dead? Had she reached her journey's end safely? He tried to extract comfort from the confidence she had expressed in the ability and integrity of the old man who drove with far greater recklessness than one would have looked for in a wild and irresponsible youngster.

He recalled with a thrill the imperious manner in which she gave directions to the man, and his surprising servility. It suddenly occurred to him that she was no ordinary person; he was rather amazed that he had not thought of it before.

Moreover, now that he thought of it, there was, even in the agreeable rejoinders she had made to his offerings, the faint suggestion of an accent that should have struck him at the time but did not for the obvious reason that he was then not at all interested in her. Her English was so perfect that he had failed to detect the almost imperceptible foreign flavor that now took definite form in his reflections. He tried to place this accent. Was it French or Italian or Spanish? Certainly it was not German.

He took a few turns up and down the long porch, stopping finally at the upper end. The clear, inspiring clang of a hammer on an anvil fell suddenly upon his ears. He looked at his watch. The hour was nine, certainly an unusual time for men to be at work in a forge. He remembered two men in the taproom who were bare-armed and wore the shapeless leather aprons of the smithy.

Hart's tavern is entertainingly serio-comic, when suddenly tragedy takes the stage—battling, murder and sudden death.

Mother Wasp's Good Work.

So far as known, only one small insect—a wasp of the spheer family—among the millions of creatures belonging to a lower order than man, has ever employed the aid of a tool to accomplish a desired result. The mother wasp of this family digs a tunnel in the ground, deposits her eggs in it, and after the wasp has made its tunnel and deposited the eggs, it finishes its task by ramming down pellets of earth, little stones, etc., into the mouth of the tunnel. This is the race habit of these wasps. It is recorded on undoubted authority that one inventive mother, when the mouth of the tunnel was covered to a level with the rest of the ground about it, brought a quantity of fine grains of dirt to the spot and picked up a small pebble in her mandibles, used it as a hammer in pounding them down with rapid strokes, thus making the spot as firm and as hard as the surrounding surface. Then she departed, brought more dirt, picked up the pebble again and used it.

MAKING STUDY OF VOLCANOES

Department of Agriculture Has Taken Up New Line, Which Is Bound to Be of Interest.

The department of agriculture has begun the extensive observation of the volcanoes within its borders and insular possessions, and has recently taken formal charge of the observatory on Kilauea, Hawaiian Islands.

Prof. T. A. Ingebor, Jr., formerly of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, who has been director of the observatory since its foundation, will remain in charge. The investigations at Kilauea were begun in 1912, under the auspices of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and since 1913 have been maintained at the expense of the Hawaiian Volcano Research association, consisting chiefly of residents of Honolulu. It is expected that the weather bureau's work in volcanology will be developed in many details and eventually be extended to Alaska and other regions under the control of the United States in which active volcanoes exist.

RUDE PAL REPROVED

Gentleman Bandit Draws Line at Taking Money From Those Who Entertained Them—'I'll Be Blowed,' Says Saloonkeeper.

Chicago.—The gentleman bandit and his roughneck friend, William, were out for an evening's entertainment. They strolled into Frederick Zultcher's saloon. William flourished a revolver and began:

"Hey, youse guys, line up ober dere an—"

"No, no, William," expostulated the O. B. "Pardon the interruption, but your words and mannerisms would shock the finer sensibilities of a dandy waiter."

"Now, gentlemen," turning to Zultcher and four patrons, "we'll ask your indulgence for this evening's frolic. He spins his revolver on his forefinger as he thought. "Suppose, if there are no objections, that we start with a little dance."

"Dat's de mustard!" seconded William. "Make 'em shimmy. Get at it, youse—"

"Yes, gentlemen, I am sure you are adept at the new dances, though I profess some have rather—er—vulgar names. Nevertheless, shaking the shimmy it will be."

Zultcher and the four patrons shuffled nervously.

"They are embarrassed, I see," continued the master of ceremonies. "Strike up a little tune, William."

William turned his nose moonward and began whistling "How You Going to Keep 'Em Down on the Farm."

"Now, all together."

The five hesitated. The revolver stopped spinning on the G. B.'s forefinger and pointed menacingly at the abdomens of the five.

Jig to William's Tune.

Zultcher stepped out into the sawdust in front of the bar and, as Willam expressed it, "lift 'er up." One by one, the other four joined him. "Wheel!" shouted William. "dem guys is lolla pollyzus at dat."

"Quite correct, William," assented the G. B.

"A little faster, gentlemen," as William resumed his alternate singing and whistling, and patted his foot.

After five minutes vigorous shimmying, perspiration began to gather on five foreheads.

"Lay down to it," he yelled, punctuating his cry with a revolver shot.

Zultcher dropped to the floor. There were four more thuds.

"Now, if you gentlemen are a bit fatigued, perhaps you would appreciate a moment's rest."

The agitation on the floor ceased. Presently the gentleman bandit glanced at his wrist watch.

"It is growing late," he said coolly, "so I expect, perhaps we had better resume. Now, all together."

William began whistling.

Growl of it.

The men began hopping madly.

William, continuing his musical efforts, edged toward the cash register.

"None of that," his companion commanded sharply. "Would you take money from those who entertain you?"

William began to remonstrate. The two argued.

"The dance grows tiresome," finally said O. B. "But 'twas pleasant while it lasted. I thank you gentlemen and bid you good-night."

"An' don't youse follow or I'll plug you."

"Come, come, William," protested his companion, howling at Zultcher and his companions in misery.

The two strolled out into the dark as the five arose cautiously.

"Well, I'll be—be blowed," exploded Zultcher, when the bandits were out of earshot. "What'll you have, fellows?"

"The police," yelled one, racing to the telephone.

SIXTY-THREE "Y" MEN DECORATED

Chicago.—The Y. M. C. A. carried the Red Triangle into U. S. camps and trenches abroad at a cost of 63 lives, a sacrifice proportionately one-quarter as great as that in the American army, according to a statement issued by the national war work council of the Y. M. C. A. Of these fatalities 35 were due to disease, and the remainder to shell-fire, bombs, gas-feyer, drowning and wounds. Ten of these were women, one of whom was killed by shell fire and the others in a German air raid.

There were also 55 non-fatal casualties. These were due principally to machine gun fire, shell fire, and motor transport accidents. Numerous cases of slight wounds and gasings which were attended at dressing stations, but were not reported to headquarters, are not included.

These casualties occurred in a force which at no time exceeded 4,000 workers, of whom it is reckoned that more than one-half were never sent to the front, being employed in the hundreds of huts maintained throughout the training areas and the "leave areas."

Sixty-three "Y" workers were decorated, while in all more than 150 received official recognition for distinguished service. Thirteen of these were decorated with the Croix de Guerre, while 48 received other decorations. Of these, three received the Distinguished Service Cross, three the Order of St. Stanislaus, five the Italian Cavalieri del Corona, 38 the Italian War Cross, and one the French decoration of the Corps d'Armee. Seven were cited for the Croix de Guerre, and seven for other decorations, six commended for meritorious conduct, and twenty-nine received honorable mention in dispatches. Several units were cited in their entirety, those serving with the Third division being cited twice. More than a score more reported decorations have not yet been confirmed.

"Meats in Storage"

Every working day of the year 75,000,000 pounds of meat are required to supply home and export needs—and only 10 per cent of this is exported.

These facts must be kept in mind when considering the U. S. Bureau of Markets report that on June 1, 1919, there were 1,348,000,000 pounds of meats in cold storage. If the meat in storage was placed on the market it would only be 20 days' supply.

This meat is not artificially withheld from trade channels to maintain or advance prices.

Meats in storage consist of—

- 65 per cent (approximate) hams, bacon, etc., in process of curing. It takes 30 to 90 days in pickle or salt to complete the process.
- 10 per cent is frozen pork that is to be cured later in the year.
- 6 per cent is lard. This is only four-fifths of a pound per capita, and much of it will have to go to supply European needs.
- 19 per cent is frozen beef and lamb, part of which is owned by the Government and was intended chiefly for over-seas shipment. If this were all diverted to domestic trade channels, it would be only 1 1/2 lbs. per capita—a 3 days' supply.

From this it will be seen that "meats in storage" represent merely unfinished goods in process of curing and the working supply necessary to assure the consumer a steady flow of finished product.

External Substitute.

Here is a famous Chinese humorous story. A traveler stopped at a house and asked for a cup of tea. Having none on hand, the host sent his son out to procure some. Meanwhile the hostess put a pot of water on the fire to boil. The son did not return, and it became necessary to add some more water to the pot. This was done several times. The son still remained absent, and finally the wife said to her husband: "Inasmuch as the tea does not seem to be forthcoming, perhaps you had better offer your guest a bath."

Chinese Sweetmeats.

The Chinese are very skillful in making confectionery and possess the reputation of having some secrets the knowledge of which our own confectioners would find very desirable. They are able to empty an orange of its pulp entirely and then fill it up with fruit jelly without one being able to find the smallest cut in the rind or even a tiny hole. Indeed, they even empty an egg in this manner and fill it with a sort of almond nougat, without one being able to find the slightest break or incision in the shell.

At the Zoo.

Bobby, aged seven, was making his first visit to the zoo. He looked around at the various animals, and coming to a cage marked "Female," he rushed up to his mother in great excitement. "Oh, mother," he said, "I've always wanted to see a 'Female' and here he is!"—Cartoons Magazine.

Clifford Smith and Miss Lucy Pletz were married at Waukegan last Thursday and left immediately for a wedding trip to Niagara Falls after which they will reside at Libertyville with Mr. Smith's parents for the present. Both are well known here, as Mr. Smith's parents lived here for some time and the bride has always lived here and a host of friends extend congratulations.

The returned soldiers present at the reception last week are: Paul Cys, Wm. Peterson, Oscar Douglas, Harry Sorenson, Oliver Wilton, Fred Boehm, Fred Bartlett, James McKenzie, Jas. Leonard, Harold Daniels, Clifford Smith, Roy Wooten, Geo. Anderson, Edgar Baldwin, Axel Norien, Medrick Hussey and Frazier. About twenty others were unable to be present but we hope to be able to entertain them at a later reception.

Last Wednesday evening, June 25, Lake Villa entertained its returned soldiers in the Barnstable hall and more than three hundred people were in attendance. H. P. Lowry gave the welcoming address and the audience joined in singing America. A girl's chorus followed by an address by Lieut. Col. A. V. Smith of Waukegan, spoke of his work among the boys and the impressions received. Supper was served and H. P. Lowry acted as toastmaster. Several of the boys made response and this part was much enjoyed by the audience. The hall was decorated in the national colors and the tables were very pretty with carnations and roses. At a late hour the tables were cleaned away and all who cared to "tipped the light fantastic" to the music of McCormick's orchestra of Libertyville. All in all it was a very enjoyable affair and one long to be remembered.

Lioness Fought a Motorcar. The East African Standard describes a duel between a lioness and a lioness. The affair, it says, happened at night near Nairobi. The lioness noted a commotion in the bush near the road, then the gleaming eyes of an enraged wild animal. He accelerated his speed at the instant the lioness leaped. She struck the hood and was thrown far in advance of the car, whose wheels then passed over her. The dead lioness was flung into the car and taken back to the town in triumph. From Outlook.

He Was Supplied. July had just been going to school a short time, but considered himself wise in the ways of schoolboys. One day while playing with his younger brother he said, "Jenn, when you start to school you want to pick you out a girl. I've got one one."

Helmets Worn by German War Lords on Exhibit at Methodist Centenary Celebration

THREE helmets, absolutely guaranteed to have been worn by the former Kaiser William of Germany, Von Bethmann-Hollweg and General Ludendorff, will be on exhibition in Columbus, O., as a part of the Methodist Centenary Celebration, June 20 to July 13. They were brought out to Germany during the revolution by of Germany during the revolution and Lowell Thomas, world traveler and explorer, whose travelogue will be given in Columbus as a feature of the celebration.

Thomas entered Germany at this most critical period, without passport or authority of any kind. To do this he was forced to hide out for days on the border. He was turned back twice, but on his third attempt succeeded in getting past a Swiss guard. He made some wonderful pictures in Berlin, showing street riots and the general chaos of the city at that time.

In addition to these views and incidental lectures, Mr. Thomas will show pictures taken in Palestine at the time of General Allenby's occupation of the Holy Land, showing the British troops on this expedition.

METHODISTS SHOULD GATHER NEW ZEAL

Centenary an Inspiration Says Dr. Fisher.

Dr. Fred Fisher of New York, who has been assistant executive secretary of the Methodist Centenary drive, has turned his entire organization to the job of mobilizing Methodism in Columbus, June 20 to July 13. In outlining the campaign he has placed before 78,000 committeemen of the Methodist Church, he says: "We must stress four things. First, this will be a big Victory Celebration. The Methodists of the United States have lived more in the past year than in any 10 previous years of their existence. Now is the time for them to get together and celebrate their victory."

"In the second place, this is an opportunity for Methodists to have visualized the scenes and activities of which they have been talking for the past year, but of which they have no personal knowledge. Of these 78,000 men, only a negligible per cent has ever had the opportunity of going abroad. At the celebration they can get the trip around the world at their convenience."

"Third, this is the time to 'finish the job,' to gather inspiration and information to enable the organized workers in the church to carry out the program which has been mapped out for the next four years."

"Fourth, and most important of all, if the celebration realizes the ideals which these who are back of it hold, it must be the inspiration for planning work for the next century. Anning work for the next century. We look upon the marvels that have been accomplished we should gather new faith and new zeal for enterprises that can be measured only in terms of another century. We must, in a word, weld ourselves together in a great spiritual purpose to strike the bull's eye."

Dr. Fisher indicated that 150 trained executives, in addition to the 78,000 volunteer workers, will stimulate interest in the Centenary Celebration during the next six weeks.

JULY 7 NEGRO DAY

Trips Planned For Visitors to Methodist Centenary.

Negro Methodists, in Columbus as Centenary Celebration visitors, will make a pilgrimage to Upper Sandusky, birthplace of the Home Missionary movement, to honor the memory of its founder, John Stewart, a man of its own race. The trip is scheduled for Saturday July 5.

Other trips planned include a visit to the grave of Ben Hanby, author of "Nellie Gray," in Otterbein cemetery, to Ohio Wesleyan University, Delaware; perhaps in smaller numbers to Wilberforce, and possibly to Gibraltar, where so many found, by underground route, safe haven in Civil war days.

Monday, July 7, has been designated officially as "Negro Day," and will be observed at the Centenary Celebration grounds with an elaborate program of pageantry, addresses, special music and parades. For this occasion, Dr. W. E. Dubois, editor of The Crisis, published in New York has written a pageant "The Star of Ethiopia," which will be produced in the Coliseum by colored participants. The theme of the pageant is the evolution of the race traced through progressive stages of achievement to the present day. A chorus of 500 voices, all Negroes, will present the pageant music.

Leading Lady in 'The Wayfarer' at Methodist Centenary Celebration

MISS HELEN NEWITT, dramatic lyric soprano, will be the soloist in "The Wayfarer," the great religious pageant which will be presented as a part of the Methodist Centenary celebration in Columbus, O., June 20 to July 13. Henry Herbert, English Shakespearean interpreter, and Mme. Blanche Yurka, will have the leading speaking parts. Viola Ellis, contralto, will be a soloist.

The pageant will be presented on the largest stage in America, in the Coliseum of the exposition grounds, which seats 8,000 persons. Nearly 1,000 costumed characters and a 1,000 trained voices will augment the effectiveness of the pageant.
